

SRB

Closing Rwanda's Youth Sexual Health Access Gap

A concept note & funding proposal for a national sexual-health access initiative

One outcome:

Every young person in Rwanda can access the sexual health services they need, with dignity.

USD 2.0–2.5M

catalytic ask — circulating to funders, none secured yet

The gap is access, not awareness

21,469 adolescent births recorded in 2023, up 6.8% year on year

96% of 15–24-year-olds know where to get an HIV test

45% of young women still don't go

The barrier is privacy and access, not knowledge.

Young people avoid pharmacies and clinics where they fear being seen.

One private kit, two delivery tracks

A single, comprehensive, private commodity kit converts existing knowledge into protective behaviour, at national scale.

TESTED THROUGH THREE ANALYTICAL TRACKS

The evidence base

National data shows a clear gap for Rwanda's young people.

SRB targets the moments and barriers that drive these outcomes.

Strong returns through healthier lives and lower system costs.

<5%

of girls aged 15–19
use contraception
at first sex

24%

of all new HIV infections are in young women aged 15–24

5:1+

modelled return on investment across three prevented-outcome categories

The concept

One kit.
Two pathways.
Shared oversight.

A single kit that uses existing national and international SRHR supply chains.

Free annual distribution in schools for ages 15–19. Discreet retail and subscription access for ages 20–30.

Government, UN and technical partners ensure clinical oversight and commodity supply.

Outcome and role

Kezah authored the SRB concept note.

Evidence-based problem analysis
Delivery model and partnership architecture
Budget and ROI case
MEL framework and roadmap

The concept note is drafted and circulating to prospective funders.

No commitment secured yet.

Lessons

The real design problem is usually the access gap, not the awareness gap

When prevention is priced against the cost of the alternative, it becomes an investment case, not a subsidy ask

